New Zealand is to host the 2012 Agricultural Biotechnology International Conference. Science and Innovation Minister Wayne Mapp says the Government will invest $100,000 to bring top experts in the field to Rotorua for the event, to be held from September 2 to 6 next year. The ministry and AusBiotech played key roles in securing the conference for New Zealand, he said. Agriculture generated more than $24.5 billion in exports in the last financial year. The conference will be hosted by NZBIO, representing the biotechnology industry.
