Its not just rugby that brings heavyweights from around the globe to New Zealand, as shown by the lineup of speakers confirmed for a top international agricultural biotechnology conference to be held in Rotorua next year. New Zealand's biotechnology industry organisation NZBio is hosting the Agricultural Biotechnology International Conference on September 2-6 next year with support from its Australian counterpart, AusBiotech. Keynote speakers are confirmed from some of the world's leading research, investment and commercial companies in the fields of biotechnology, energy, health, nutrition and food, including Du Pont Agricultural Biotechnology, energy crop producer Ceres, Monsanto, and investment firm Burrill & Company.
